Childhood

[I]

fireflies and a wet cornfield, the sun lurking amidst the clouds, bees and butterflies flooded by the canopy. Stench of mud rising from the ground after the rain's initial advent; the scent of incense sticks and hibiscus petals; braided bark of the banyan, and a dormant afternoon under it; nostalgia. A steep well with embarkment, its water| contemplating the sky; memories, moss settled on a deserted stone.

[II]

a pint of reminiscence, of my mother's beauty and her fondle, of the spring and the winter, the monsoon, the paper boats, of the innocence, the friendship, the milk teeth wisdom and the ant trail. Scuffle for the candy jar upon the fridge, marbles and kites; those times, when the sky was a marvel and the rainbow, it's wreath. The morning prayer where we learned how join our hands in an ascetic spirit, and the ginger tea. I and all my friends, with oiled and combed hair, with little heads and tiny fists, marching in time.
